

REFERENCES

- Ayas, C. (2006). An examination of the relationship between the integration of technology into social studies and constructivist pedagogies from The Turkish online journal of educational technology. 5(1).
- Bulfin, S. & McGraw, K. (2015). Digital literacy in theory, policy and practice: old concerns, new opportunities from Teaching and digital technologies: big issues and critical questions, pp. 266-279. Port Melbourne, VIC: Cambridge.
- Crowhurst, M. (Ed.) (2015). Beginning Teachers: Reviewing Disastrous Lessons. Rotterdam, The Netherlands : Sense Publishers.
- Green, B. (1988). Subject-specific literacy and school learning: a focus on writing. Australian Journal of Education, 32(2), pp. 156-179.
- Green, B. (2002). English in Australia: A literacy project of our own? from English in Australia, 134. pp. 27.
- Green, B. & Beavis, C. (Eds.). (2012). Literacy in 3D: An integrated perspective in theory and practice. Melbourne: ACER.
- IDEO. (2012). Design thinking for educators. Chicago, IL: IDEO. Retrieved from <http://www.designthinkingforeducators.com/>
- Papert, S. (1993). The children's machine: Rethinking schools in the age of the computer. New York: Basic Books.
- Razzouk, R. & Shute, V. (2012). What is Design Thinking and Why Is It Important? from Review of Educational Research. 82(3) pp.330-348.